

Tax incentives for gas and electricity import for project Enhancing energy security of Moldova

The Government has approved tax and customs incentives for the import of natural gas and electricity under Enhancing Energy Security of the Republic of Moldova project. The project aims to ensure the security of natural gas and electricity supply for all consumers.

Exemptions from value-added tax, excises, and customs duties will reduce the project implementation costs by about 80 million euros. It has a total value of 400 million euros, being financed by the European Bank for Reconstruction and Development (EBRD) and implemented by Energocom.

Energy security remains a priority for the government, especially on the brink of the cold season. According to the authorities and enterprises in the energy sector, our country is prepared for the 2025-2026 heating season: The volume of natural gas required for the cold season is practically fully acquired, and for electricity, the annual procurement procedures are set to be launched by 30 September.
